Brenda Joyce Bobo was born on August 3, 1961, in Columbia, Tennessee and passed away on October 21, 2019, at her home in Williamsport.

She was the daughter of the late Carter L.C. Smith and Esther Elizabeth Rosson Smith.

She was also preceded in death by her brother William Eugene Smith and sister Martha Ann Burrow.

She is survived by her daughter Kimberly Denning. Son David L.C. Bobo. 4

Grandchildren: Johnathan Ray Simmons, Johnny Ray Lancaster, Baby Shawn Denning, and Haven Denning. Brother Wayne Smith. Sisters Helen White of Duck River, Frances Tidwell of Centerville, Elaine Fuller of Columbia, and Lisa Smith of Hampshire. Brother-in-law William Eugene Burrow. Along with many other relatives, friends, and loved ones.

Brenda worked as a CNA at the Life Care Center.

Brenda enjoyed the simple things in life. In her younger days, she would go for walks with her sisters in the park or just lay out on a blanket and watch the stars. She also loved to go fishing back then. She enjoyed going "Yardsaling" with her sisters. They would get up early and plan out their stops that they were going to make on a given morning.

She had a great love for Country Music. She liked most all of it, but imparticular her favorite was Willie Nelson. If there was a spot for a #1 fan she would have contended for it. Brenda listened to and loved his music, she even had a Willie Nelson lamp that stayed at her bedside. Once she fell ill she had a request to go to one of his concerts, and to meet him face to face. She was able to do both, thanks to the efforts of her sisters who took her in a wheelchair to see him live.

She loved her family. Her grandchildren were her world. Brenda enjoyed the time she got to spend with them. She loved to gather for cookouts and holidays. Slowing down and spending time with those she loved was important to her.

She was "one of the best" her sisters say about her. She didn't need or want diamonds, gold, or the finer things. Brenda was content with what she had. She will be deeply missed by those that knew and loved her.
