“ So many of my happy childhood memories include Barry Frazier. What a character he was when we were growing up! We all got so many laughs at his antics. It would be hard to pick just one favorite Barry memory. One of my favorite moments would have to be that one 4th of July at Bonnie's, when he was shooting bottle rockets and roman candles into PeeWee's store. haha. Good times. Barry was one of a kind, never a cross word, always a friendly hello, and more fun than a barrel of monkeys. He will be missed. Rest in peace, my dear cousin.

“ Anyone that knew Barry knew how kind he was to anyone he met. He loved fishing and hunting when he was able. My best memory of him was the time he found a hornet's nest in the woods in the winter. He brought it home to hang on his wall. Well, you can imagine what happened when the nest got warm. And also, he was 50. Not 60. But I feel sure he would laugh at that too.

“ What I loved most about Barry was his kindness to anyone he met. He loved fishing and hunting when he was younger and able. One of my fondest memories of Barry was the time he found a hornet's nest in the woods during the winter. He brought it inside to hang on the wall. Well, you can imagine when the nest warmed up. Also, Barry was 50. Not 60. But he would think this was funny too.
