“ Mom I wish we would have had more time together. I was so happy the day you came to visit me. I'll never forget your last words. You said Stacy i hope you know i never meant to hurt you. You apologized. You said you had it rough worst then any of the others and for that you were sorry. And you told me you truly do love me. I love you too mom. I never tried to fault you for the way my life was. I learned from it and grew. I never not loved you. I wanted nothing more then to have a mom. And when you left that day after visit i was so excited to get out to have my mom in my life. It was the best news i had had in years. I was thinking of all the things we would have to do. I was so excited just to let everyone know look this is my mom and almost a year to the gate and i got the call i dreaded to ever get. Once again i was being called to the chaplains office. Lord I knew it was no good news when youd get the call from the chaplain. And only this time it was you who god had called to take home. I was crushed of all hope of ever actually having you in my life. You were taken too fast. I never got to say goodbye or anything. It breaks me inside we never did get to build a relationship. I love you though mom i always have. I think of you often. I wish you were still here. I miss you. Your up there with my dad, roger, Barbara, your mom and dad and now a close friend of my little b is there with you all. Watch over my kids and me please lord knows we need it. And until we meet again fly high with the rest of the Angels. Ill always love you! Momma. Xoxox your baby girl stacy lee rupp
