“ I Started working with David at Nixon Detroit Diesel back in 1987, and we became friends immediately. We were both the same age. We worked together at Nixon, and later Covington Detroit diesel and we remained friends all these years after I left Covington to work for a different company. He was an all around great, honest, and hard working guy. He was a big Dallas Cowboys fan. We used to joke back and forth about our football teams. David was also an excellent diesel mechanic. I learned a lot from David, he helped to train me when I was starting out at Nixon, fresh out of NADC. David was also the guy I would call later in my career if I needed help diagnosing a problem I couldn't figure out. David was always happy to help me, that's the kind of guy David was. I am fortunate that I had the opportunity to know, and be friends with him. I'm not sure, but David may have been the one who gave me my nickname "Happ". I will always remember my friend David. My sincere condolences go out to his family and friends.
