“ I never met Jim but heard lots about him from my sister Jean and brother in law Bill. I missed meeting a really special guy, and that I regret. Jim was a kind, thoughtful, and compassionate man who always had time for those less fortunate. He often said he'd had a fortunate life, showing that good is often attracted to good. Bless you Jim, sorry we missed one another. Happy trails. Steve Martin.

“ Jim was a great man. He was a friend and mentor to me. I learned a great deal about life and business from him. Many of those lessons were hard to accept and sometimes I didnt agree with him, but after I would give it time to settle in... it would all make sense. I have taken those lessons and the wisdom he shared with me along my lif journey. I now find myself applying "Jim Oliver" concepts and thought processes in my own career and sharing them with my family and friends. He will be greatly missed. The world has lost an exemplar, that heaven has gained. Thank you Jim for all the memories!

“ This is my first memory with Jim I was trying to get a shinglin company started and jim was my first customer I didn't make no money on it and jim asked me he was pretty good at crunching numbers and he didn't see how I made any money off him I told him you look like you might know people and I just needed somebody to pass it on what a good job I did and not charge a arm and a leg for my work and jim said well johnny usually when people know i am a millionaire they try to make a penny off me and you didn't make nothing I hope he didn't notice but my mouth drops a mile when he told me he was a millionaire but carma pays off causes I went to work for him for 15 years running his injection plant.

“ Every time I saw Jim he filled my heart with his amazing warmth. He would acknowledge every child with a hug a laugh and a sense of belonging! To know him was to know Love. I cannot imagine how the future will be without him physically in it but his presence will be felt for years and year to come. I love you all and will continue to pray for comfort, for some sort of peace knowing we will all meet again.

“ I was showing a couple customers around the plant one day, we were nearing the end of the tour and as we passed the service dept. I saw Jim, working on, or at least supervising something. I asked the couple if they would like to meet the person that started it all. They said, yes of course and although, Jim appeared to be busy, he stopped and we spoke for what seemed like an hour. These two old men telling their life stories. Needless to say, the customers bought an Oliver travel trailer that day. That was the kind of guy, Jim was. He was never too busy to stop and speak with someone. RIP my friend. Thank you for treating me like family.
