“ I moved to Hohenwald in 1996 (Hummingbird Cove) and met Joyce not long after that. We spent a few years walking every morning - I remember her coming by to meet me for our morning walk on the morning of 9/11 - we knew something had just happened but were not sure just what at the time. We learned a lot about each other on those walks using the time to talk to each other as friends do - when her hips and back starting giving her problems the walks stopped - I always missed those early morning hikes down to the main road and back. She always remembered my birthday and I always tried to make sure I remembered hers and she loved me to bring her a homemade pound cake and chocolate peanut bark at Christmas- she was a strong woman and a good friend. She showed great strength over the last several years enduring many tragedies relating to her family - how much life can change so quickly. She was one of a kind and it will not seem the same knowing she is no longer just around the corner. I pray peace for her family and great memories to treasure. I am in Texas now and will not be able to attend the funeral but I will be keeping John and her family in my thoughts and prayers during this difficult time.
