“ I have lots of memories with Riley, and I’m gonna hate not making anymore.

I remember one night specifically, he had friends over drinking in his garage. He said his parents didn’t care as long as he was quiet, and no fireworks.

We all were getting drunk, and he had the idea to play chicken with some bottle rockets. I said to him “ what about your mom? Didn’t she say no fireworks?”

He responded with something along the lines of “these aren’t fireworks they are bottle rockets, she will be fine.”

We all go outside gather in a circle and light the bottle rockets and toss them on the ground.

Everyone took off running back into the shed except for Riley and me.

After they all went off, We start walking back to the garage and he asked me “ do you smell something burning?” I said “no?” As I’m looking behind to make sure we did T start a fire. When we got to the garage door, everyone who ran in locked us out. Riley kicks the door to try and get them to open it, and I notice a red spark flying. He kicked the door again and I seen another spark.

I said “Riley! Your pants!” He looks down right as he kicks the door and sees the same thing. He started to hop on one leg and trying to pat down the other.

One of the bottle rockets went off and caught his sock on fire. That makes me think of a cartoon when they ask “does something smell like it’s on fire?” As they are on fire.

That was Riley though. Never a dull moment, and I’ll miss the hell out of him.
